"Value for Value, Madam!"

eral years, and have come to Washington but rarely. Dear me, I had not been there my third day before I found you!"

We sat silent for some moments, each regarding the other.

"It was rumored in diplomatic circles, of course, that you were in touch with the ministry of England," I ventured. "I myself saw that much."

"Naturally. Of Mexico also! At least, as you saw in our little carriage race, Mexico was desirous enough to establish some sort of communication with my humble self!"

"Calhoun was right!" I exclaimed. "He was entirely right, madam, in insisting that I should bring you to him that morning, whether or not you wished to go."

"How did he receive you, madam?" I asked.

"Why, took my hand in both his, and bowed as though I indeed were queen, he a king."

"Then you got on well?"

"Truly, for he was wiser than his agent, monsieur. He found answers by asking questions."

"For instance, he asked—"

"What had been my bull down that night—who was there—how I enjoyed myself! In a moment we were talking as though we had been friends for years. The grand visitor brought in two more of his, in each a steamed apple. Monsieur, I have not seen diplomatic such as this. Naturally, I was helpless."

"You told him somewhat of your self?"

"He did not allow me to do that, monsieur."

"But he told you somewhat of this country?"

"Ah, yes, yes! So then I saw what held him up in his work, what kept him alive. I saw something I have not often seen—a purpose, a principle, in a public man. His love for his own land touched even me, how or why I scarcely know. Yes, we spoke of the poor, the oppressed, of the weary and the heavy laden."

"Did he ask you what you know of Mexico and England?"

"Rather what I knew of the poor in Europe. I told him some things I knew of that hopeless land—my own land. Then he went on to tell me of America and its hope of a free democracy of the people. Believe me, I listened to Mr. Calhoun. Never mind what he said of Mr. Van Zandt and Sir Richard Pakenham. At least, as you know, I paid off a little score with Sir Richard that next morning."

"What was that, madam? I was the last that I forgot. Mr. Calhoun's attitude toward the stranger of my race, and the stranger of my race."

"I do not know that I may ask those."

"You would be surprised if I told you the truth? What I required of Mr. Calhoun was permission and aid still further to study his extraordinary country, its extraordinary ways, its extraordinary ignorance of itself. I have told you that I needed to travel, to study, to observe mankind—and those governments invented or tolerated by mankind."

"Since then, madam, I concluded, stepping to assist her with her chair, as she signified her completion of our report, since you do not feel now inclined to be specific, I feel that I ought to make my adieu, for the time at least. It grows late. I shall remember this little evening all my life. I own my defeat. I do not know why you are here, or for whom."

"At what hotel do you stop?"

"The little place of Jacques Berthillon, a square or so beyond the Place d'Armes."

"In that case," said she, "believe me, it would be more discreet for you to remain unseen in Montreal. No matter which flag is mine, I may say that much for a friend and comrade in the service."

"But what else?"

"She looked about her. "Be my guest to night!" she said suddenly. "There is danger!"

"For me?" I laughed. "At my hotel? On the streets?"

"No, for me."

"Where?"

"Here."

"And of what, madam?"

"Of a man; for the first time I am afraid, in spite of all."

I looked at her straight. "Are you not afraid of me?" I asked.

"She looked at me fairly, her color coming. "With the fear which draws a woman to a man," she said.

"Whereas, mine is the fear which causes a man to flee from himself!"

"But you will remain for my protection? I should feel safer. Besides, in that case I should know the answer."

"How do you mean?"

"I should know whether or not you were married!"

CHAPTER XV.

With Madam the Baroness.

It is not for good women that men have fought battles, given their lives and staked their souls.—Mrs. W. K. Clifford.

"But, madam—" I began.

"Monsieur hesitates—he is lost!" she said. "But no, I am weary. I have been much engaged today. I have made it my plea never to fatigue myself. It is my hour now for my bath, my exercise, my bed, if you please. I fear I must bid you good night, one way or the other. You will be welcome here none the less, if you care to remain. I trust you did not find our little repast to-night unpleasant? Believe me, our breakfast shall be as good. There'll be expert in omelets, and our coffee is such as perhaps you may not find general in these provinces."

"Was there the slightest mocking sneer in her words? Did she despise me as a faint heart? I could not tell, but did not like the thought."

"Believe me, madam," I answered hotly, "you have courage, at least. Let me match it. Nor do I deny that this attack commences on my part too. If you please, in these circumstances, I shall remain."

"You need remain," she asked simply. "I inserted a finger in each waistcoat pocket and showed her the buttons of two derailleurs; and at the back of my neck—to her smiling amusement—just the tip of the hilt of a short bowie-knife, which went into a leather case under the collar of my coat. And again I drew around the belt which I wore so that she could see the barrel of a good pistol, which had been suspended under cover of the bull skirt of my coat."

"She laughed. I saw that she was not amused to weapons. I should have guessed her the daughter of a soldier or acquainted with arms in some way. "Of course," she said, "there might be need of these, although I think not. And in any case, if trouble can be deferred until tomorrow, why concern oneself over it? You interest me. I begin yet more to approve of you."

"Then, as to that breakfast—a la fourchette with madam; if I remain, will you agree to tell me what is your business here?"

"She laughed at me gaily. "I might," she said, "provided that meantime I had learned whether or not you were married that night."

I do not profess that I read all that was in her face as she stepped back toward the satin curtains and swept me the most graceful courtesy I had ever seen in all my life. I felt like reaching out a hand to restrain her. Then I recalled my mission; and I remembered what Mr. Calhoun and Dr. Ward had said. I was not a man; I was a government agent. She was not a woman; she was my opponent. Yet, but then—

Slowly I turned to the opposite side of this long central room. There were curtains here also. I drew them, but as I did so I glanced back. Again, as on that earlier night, I saw her face framed in the amber folds—a face laughing, mocking. With an exclamation of discontent, I threw down my heavy pistol on the floor, cast my coat across the foot of the bed to prevent the delicate covering from being soiled by my boots, and so rested without further disrobing.

In the moving apartment I could hear her moving about, humming to herself some air as unconcernedly as though no such being as myself existed in the world. I heard her presently accost her servant, who entered through some passage not visible from the central apartments. Then without concealment there seemed to go forward the ordinary routine of madam's toilet for the evening.

At last she called out to me: "Monsieur!"

MADE MILLIONS LAUGH.

Crowns With Forepaugh-Sells Bros.

Shows From All Parts of Earth.

The management of the great Adam Forepaugh and Sells' Brothers' Big United Shows have expended a great deal of energy and money in gathering together for this season a company of real clowns. The habit with other shows is to put a funny comedian on a cheap man and expect him to tickle the audience to death. This show engages a man who is funny regardless of what he wears. Then it pays him the salary he deserves.

The art of making people laugh is one of the most difficult known to the sciences of entertaining. There are 50 funny men with the circus this season that is to be here soon who can bring laughter tears to the eyes of a cigar store Indian. There are a few people in every town who go to circus performances in a frame of mind that says as clearly as can be, "I dare you to make me laugh."

There are jesters with this show who have made melancholy kings shirk with laughter. There are comedians from the famous comic opera companies of Europe. There are pantomimists from famous old Drury Lane, and any number of America's most successful stage buffoons. They need no shapsticks and inflated bladders to create laughter. They are even funny to look at. When they begin their antics, dignified old maid gets to giggling, children shout with joy, and chronic grouches shake hands with themselves for having had the good sense to attend the show.

This circus believes that men and women as well as children were made to laugh; that laughter is as necessary as sunshine. With this belief as a part of its policy, only the best talent is engaged. They are sure-fire artists who do humanity the most good that all the patent medicines ever concocted.

No other circus in the world has ever created the great interest and amazement always awakened by Forepaugh and Sells Bros' shows. When they appear in Connelville on Saturday, May 7 it means a glorious holiday of fun and thrills.

YOUNG WOLTER FOUND GUILTY.

Jury Convicts Him for Brutal Ruth Wheeler Murder.

PRISONER SHOWS NO EMOTION

Doomed Man Walks From Court Room to Tomb in Utter Indifference As to His Fate—Jury Finds Wolter Guilty of First Degree Murder.

New York, April 22.—Albert W. Wolter, who has been tried for the murder of Ruth Wheeler, the girl who went to his room to get employment as a stenographer, was found guilty of murder in the first degree by a jury in Judge Foster's court of general sessions.

From the time that the jury returned to its seats until Wolter was led out of the courtroom after the reception of the verdict he gave no sign of the slightest emotion.

Wolter was standing at the bar outside the railing at which his lawyer was sitting. The foreman faced the German squarely and said:

"We find the defendant guilty of murder in the first degree."

Not a spark of interest shown in Wolter's face. The two Wheeler girls sat with friends.

Judge Foster set next Wednesday for the day of sentence. Wolter walked along the benches where the spectators sat with his eyes looking into the faces of the crowd. He turned into the hallway that leads to the Tomb without a trace of excitement.

Efforts were made to get a statement from Wolter on his way to the Tomb, but he refused to talk. "I don't want to talk tonight. I'm tired and I want to get a little good sleep," he said.

Ruth Wheeler was killed on Thursday, March 24. Falling to the floor of her body in the fireplace, Wolter cut it apart and left the bust and head wrapped in burlap on a table. From where it was pushed into the yard below. He was arrested on Saturday, March 26, and was placed on trial on Monday last.

He pleaded over, knowing Ruth Wheeler but testimony showed that she had been lured to his room expecting to obtain work as a stenographer. There Wolter had attacked her and had murdered her in the struggle, strangling her with a rope tied about her neck.

The boy's counsel said with eloquence that Wolter was too tender hearted to harm a rat, but the twelve jurors decided that he had strangled Ruth Wheeler and thrust her body into the fireplace, where she perished with all her crumpled body, writhed and burned.

MYSTERIOUS BOX OF CANDY

Makes Its Debut in Dr. Hyde Trial.

Kansas City, April 22.—A mysterious box of candy has made its first appearance in the Hyde trial. The Dr. Hyde gave Stella Swope, 115 candy and that she a week afterward was taken down with typhoid fever. It was brought out in the evidence by Mrs. Anna Houshman, one of the nurses at the Swope home during the typhoid epidemic there.

The illness of R. D. Mitchell, a witness for the state, who has been suffering with fever for the last two weeks, which it is feared yet may develop into typhoid, is the reason that the trial did not take up the order of proof in the trial of Dr. Hyde, that they first decided on and which was carried out in the quest and before the grand jury.

ARRESTS IN SUGAR FRAUDS

Three Former Federal Employees Are Taken Into Custody.

New York, April 22.—George F. Rodell, who served as chief clerk under James F. Vall during the latter's service as deputy supervisor of the port and Charles D. Drew and Charles H. Wardwell, who formerly were assistant customs weighers in this city, were arrested by United States Marshal Honked and federal agents, catching them with evidence in a conspiracy to defraud the government out of duties on ship cargoes of sugar, molasses, flour and other goods.

Judge Hazel fixed the bail of each of the three men arrested at $11,000.

COMET IS PHOTOGRAPHED

Its Head Is Shown to Be 196,000 Miles in Diameter.

San Francisco, April 22.—A photograph of the head and inner part of the tail of Halley's comet, in which the length of which is much of the tail as was recorded was 1,000,000 miles, has been taken at the Lick Observatory by astronomer Curtis.

The extreme diameter of the head is shown in the photograph as 196,000 miles.

Old Home Week at Mt. Pleasant Is Attracting Wide Attention.

Special to The Courier.

MT. PLEASANT, April 22.—No formal opening day has yet been set for the Pike Run Country Club, located on this side of Jones Mills and the buildings are at present in charge of a caretaker who has looked after the grounds during the past winter. Stew and Cox of the club cannot be present here for some time as he cannot be released from his duties as steward at one of the fraternity houses at Princeton until after the college commencement. This will delay his arrival here until about the latter part of June. The Home Committee, A. C. Overholt of Scottsdale, Dr. Hugh Jamison of Greensburg, and John D. Hitchman of this place, have everything about the club in excellent condition for entertainment. Others will flock to the links on the first warm days and to remain in splendid shape for matches.

Old Home Week Letters.

Secretary J. B. Coldsouth of the Old Home Week celebration here, is receiving dozens of letters each day from showmen who wish to book attractions during that week. No less than a dozen offers have been made from men making balloon ascensions to scenic dates here at that time. All such offers will more than likely be accepted, as the committee in charge have decided to accept a man that can fly, and do not propose to place an exhibitor anything so tame as a balloon ascension. It is an assured fact that attractions will not be lacking that week, as at this early date dozens have been booked. The first display of anything was put out Friday morning relative to the gala week and at an early date the huge posters and official programs will be put out. At that time, July 14th to 16th, inclusive the entire population of both Fayette and Westmoreland counties will naturally flock to what is fast becoming known as Greater Mt. Pleasant.

Local and Personal.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Myers wish to announce the engagement of their eldest daughter, Miss Estelle Amelia Myers, to John Cress, Jr., of Mt. Pleasant township. The wedding will take place at an early date.

A score of people from town attended the literary society held at Mt. Joy school house last evening. At that time a well arranged literary and musical program was carried out. The features of the evening's entertainment was the debate "Resolved, That Socialism is detrimental to the welfare of the Nation." The question has been much talked of and privately debated by farmers in that community, and last evening many of them turned out to hear it publicly decided. Arthur Johnston gave a fine argument for the
